EL CERRITO WINS PAVING SUIT

HOLDING UP OF BONDS DENIED

The suit that was brought some time ago by F. Ceqgi and others of El Cerrito against the members of the council of that city, the California Construction company, Ross L. Calfee engineer and Elliot & Horne bond buyers, to invalidate $459,000 worth of street bonds for work done in the Berkeley Country Club Terrace, was decided last evening by Superior Judge A. B. McKenzie in favor of the defendants.

Unless the case is appealed the decision means that the bonds will be issued as ordered by the council of the county line town.

In the complaint that was filed there were charges made that the work was not up to specifications, and many other allegations.

The California Construction company, Ross Calfee and Elliot & Horne were represented by attorney T. M. Carlson and the city of El Cerrito was represented by the City Attorney, J. H. Peters.

Attorneys W. F. Huber, W. D. Stark and H. E. Thompson represented the plaintiffs in the action.

CONTRACTORS ASK FOR BOND

Attorney T. N. Calfee, representing the contractors of the city asked the city council last night to amend ordinance 258 as a matter of protection to the business men and the laborers in the building crafts.

In a communication he suggested that contractors be compelled to file a bond in the sum of $5,000 and pay an annual license of $100. The bond would have to be filed before a license was granted.

It was stated that the plasterers, electricians and plumbers of the city were protected and the contractors were the only class where anyone could come here and start in the building of homes with no restrictions.

On motion of Councilman E. A. Martin the matter was referred to the ordinance and building committees for one week, for consideration and afterward a meeting is to be arranged with the contractors, and the proposed amendments to the ordinance thoroughly discussed.

Porch Used As Target By Car Drivers

Joe Muchado of San Pablo confesses that he is disgusted. In fact, one may say that he wonders if it is all worth while and whether it is worth the effort.

The whole affair started some time ago when a stage driver mistook Muchado's front porch on San Pablo avenue for something or other and crashed into it. Joe took a dust pan and broom and scraped up the remnants of his porch and nailed it back on the front of the house.

The last straw came Sunday night when a Colusa motorist smashed into the front porch again all in good, clean fun, of course.

Now Joe wonders whether it will be worth while to replace the porch, scrap it, or tack it on the rear of his house.

Delay On Light Plan Protested By R. W. Timmons

R. W. Timmons in a communication to the city council last night wanted to know why the delay in ordering the work of installing electroliers in the Nevin avenue lighting district, as the petitioners had asked for a certain type of standard and were willing to pay for them.

Councilman Elmer Martin, chairman of the light committee, made the statement that there was no particular reason for holding up the project, but at the last meeting the matter had been laid over for two weeks to give the members further time to investigate the proposition.

"There is no desire on the part of the council" said Martin "to deviate from the home industry plan as the body is in favor of home industry. It is the intention of the council to make its final report next week."

[illegible] headquarters. He appeared to be greatly pleased with the trip and stated yesterday that his report was ready for transmittal to Hoyt.

The Raymond company has just completed construction of the San Mateo bridge across San Francisco bay and Struthers was here over the week end in connection with the opening of this $7,500,000 project.

Urgent Wire

Upon arrival at the San Francisco office of the company Struthers, who makes his home at the Los Angeles plant of the firm, stated that an urgent wire from Hoyt was awaiting him.

With the assistance of city officials, Struthers inspected the Ford plant site especially that portion in which his company might be interested in the construction of a wharf and foundation for a building. Arrangements were made with the Pacific company for the sinking of two of the patented concrete piles at the new inner harbor wharf Sunday. Although Struthers had made the arrangement for nine o'clock Sunday morning, he and his party did not arrive until 11 o'clock, when the piles were driven.

Assisted by workmen, Struthers made a complete test and analysis of the piles, paying particular attention to the depth to which they were driven and the amount of force necessary to drive them down. He pointed out that this was an important item in the building of the new Ford wharf which is only a few hundred feet below where the new wharf is being built on the waterfront.

Seek Contract

The Raymond company is seeking the contract for the construction of the Long Beach plant of the Ford company and the opinion was expressed yesterday that if the Raymond company is granted the contract for the southern structure the Richmond plant may be started immediately after the completion of work in the south.

Struthers was extremely reluctant to discuss dates and figures regarding the Ford plant but admitted that "work is going ahead for the plant here."

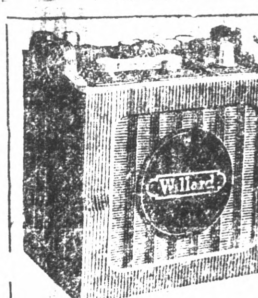

Persistent rumors have been bruited about the last few days that construction of the Richmond Ford plant may start as early as July or as soon thereafter as the title suit which has been filed against the Ford tract here has been [illegible].

"THE WOMAN OF AFFAIRS"

THURS—CALIFORNIA-FEDERAL STYLE SHOW

GILBERT, GARBO APPEARING IN NEW FILM

"A Woman of Affairs," a syndicated film from a story by Michael Arlen, with John Gilbert and Greta Garbo as stars, and with a supporting cast which includes Lewis Stone, Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Sebastian, John Mack Brown and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. will open at the California theater today. Clarence Brown, who directed Gilbert and Miss Garbo in "Flesh and the Devil," their first appearance together, was the director.

The reunion on the screen of Gilbert and Miss Garbo was said at the time the picture was being made at the Metro Goldwyn Mayer studio to be due to the unusual interest of cinemagoers.

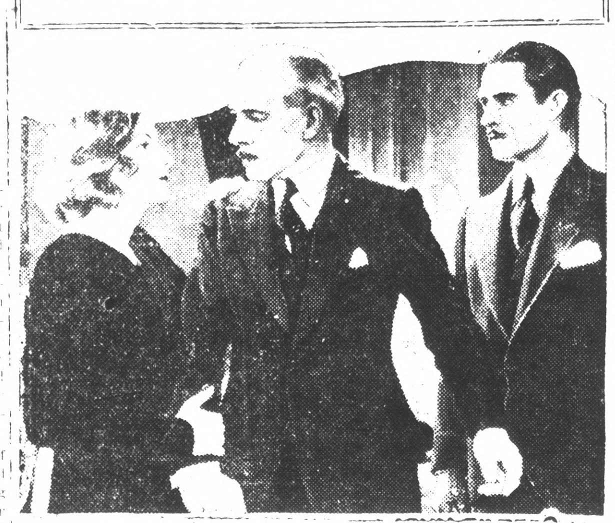

Miss Garbo has the role of a high-spirited English society girl, a very different type from those she has essayed before. For the part she has relinquished what has been termed the "Garbo slink" and has even changed the style of her clothes.

One of the interesting scenic episodes of the film is the Oxford and Cambridge boat race on the Thames and a deal of research and preliminary training was required. For one item, two eight oared crews had to be recruited. For another, all the details of the race had to be made as authentic as if they were photographed in the actual location. So much of English customs had to be transferred to the screen for the picture that the studio sent its own technical expert [illegible] to supervise the translation of the story from which the technical phases of the filming were directed.

Paul McCullough's foil for Bobby Clark is just as important to the success of their acts as Clark himself. So the latter's opinion "A good feeder is hard to find," is Clark's contention.

Clark and McCullough have worked together for twenty-five years in burlesque, vaudeville and musical comedy. Their latest Fox Movietone all-talking comedy "The Honor System" which is now playing at the California theater is a fine example of the splendid team work of the famous pair.

SYNOPSIS

Arthur Faunce returns from an Antarctic expedition. Simon Overton, the leader and Faunce's great friend, was lost. Both men loved Diane, daughter of Judge Herford, but neither had spoken. Faunce now asks Diane to marry him and she accepts but wants him to make a second expedition. Tortured by his memories, Faunce finally confesses to Dr. Gerry that Overton was not dead when he left him. Faunce found help and was saved, and later, when they returned for Overton, there was nothing to be found but a trackless waste of snow left by the blizzard. Diane knows nothing of this confession. The night before the wedding . . .

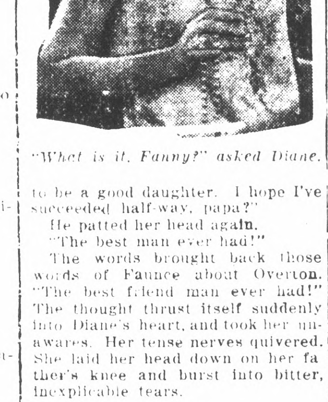

She was leaning against his knee, her cheek resting on her hand, and he could see only the soft, brown arch of her head and the cloud of hair that cloaked her shoulders.

"It's a great deal to say," she admitted. "It makes it harder for me to fill the place he's set for me in his life; but I'll try to do it. Meanwhile, papa, I hate to leave you! When I came in here tonight I came to tell you that, but we've been talking of Arthur. I've tried to be a good daughter. I hope I've succeeded half-way, papa?"

He patted her head again.

"The best man ever had!"

The words brought back those words of Faunce about Overton. "The best friend man ever had!" The thought thrust itself suddenly into Diane's heart, and took her unawares. Her tense nerves quivered. She laid her head down on her father's knee and burst into bitter, inexplicable tears.

"What is it, Fanny?" asked Diane.

Early the following morning, with the rain and sleet driving against the window-panes, in the fury of a late winter storm—the wild harbinger, in fact, of spring itself—Diane was married to Arthur Faunce.

"The handsomest couple I ever saw!" Mrs. Price whispered to Dr. Gerry, dabbing the moisture from her eyes with the handkerchief that she had already wept into a ball.

Dr. Gerry moved an eye around to look at her without moving his head, much as the drowsy crocodile views curious observers at the aquarium; but he made no comment. He had spent the night in trying to force Faunce to tell Diane the truth before she married him. He had failed, and was therefore an unwilling witness at the ceremony.

Dr. Price, small, precise, and placid, in his white surplice and black cassock, his white hair smoothed back with what Horace Walpole would have called "a soupcon of curls behind," performed the ceremony before a group of old friends and neighbors, the only witnesses. Mrs. Price lifted her plump, wrinkled face and kissed the bride on both cheeks.

"My dear, I wish you every blessing! You remind me of Rachel, and Ruth, and all the brides of the Bible."

The little woman plunged in deeper, and was still babbling along when her daughter, a little pale and nervous, came to tell Diane it was time to change her dress for the journey. Glad to escape, the two girls ran upstairs together, and Fanny and the maid made haste to help transform a white-and-silver bride into a trim, tailor-made young woman ready for the train.

"It went off beautifully, Di!" Fanny felt that she could say this with safety, as she plunged into a new hat-box after the bride's traveling-hat.

Diane stopped her with a gesture.

"What's that?"

They listened. A newsboy was shouting an extra edition, and they could hear his shrill pipe above the storm.

"Some one's called him. Fanny, go and find out what it is. There's nothing for me to do now but to work on my gloves."

The little bridesmaid, glad to hide her telltale face, ran out. Diane stood listening in strange anxiety, unaware that she was frightened.

Then Arthur's face came back to her as he had looked when he put the ring on her finger—the feverish light in his eyes, the triumph and the happiness. A feeling, deep and inexplicable, disturbed her; there had been something wanting—some element of strength, fortitude or poise.

Then she heard Fanny coming slowly back upstairs. The girl seemed to halt for an instant on her way to the door. Diane turned and saw her at the threshold. She was holding the newspaper unfolded in her hands, her eyes fixed on the front page, her face expressionless.

"What is it, Fanny?"

The question was almost a cry of alarm. Fanny made no reply and Diane went to her, taking the paper from her. As she did so, Fanny pointed to the head-lines of an article that filled the head of a column. It was a cablegram, printed in large type that seemed to stare:

"H. M. S. Pelican arrived safely at Southampton to-day, with Lieutenant Blackford and the other members of his antarctic expedition. They brought with them the well-known American explorer, Simon Overton, U. S. N. Having barely recovered from desperate illness and exposure, Overton refused to be interviewed."

Diane let the paper fall to the floor, and the two girls stood looking at each other in speechless amazement.

Down-stairs there was a moment of poignant silence in the library when the judge read the newspaper despatch in an incredulous voice that was a little deeper than usual. As he read, a sudden burst of sunshine, almost as violent as the storm, flooded the room. It warmed the moss-roses that had bloomed for the wedding, and shone still more keenly, with almost a cruel concentration, on the white face of Arthur Faunce.

It revealed Faunce's countenance at a moment when his inner self seemed to be receding, in mortal panic, from the vision of his friends. He stood, with his hand gripped like a vise on the back of a tall chair and his eyes fixed on his father-in-law. He was like a man overtaken by sudden calamity and rooted to the spot, with no more power to escape it than the victim of a nightmare.

The judge threw back his big head and looked at him.

"What can this mean, Arthur?"

Faunce gasped. His mind was still reeling, and his voice sounded a long way off to his own ears.

"It must be a mistake," he replied slowly; "a mere newspaper story—or the wrong name. Overton is dead!"

Dr. Gerry, standing back by the mantel, was watching Faunce. Knowing the story, he was convinced that in some miraculous way Overton had been rescued, and that Faunce must know it, too.

Rallying from the first shock, Faunce was facing it with some self-control.

"I think I can speak with more authority than the newspaper," he managed to say. "I was there!"

"But—oh, Mr. Faunce, don't you think it's—it's just possible?" pleaded Mrs. Price, clasping her hands.

Her little bubbling voice, like the pleasant singing of a teakettle, brought relief to a tense situation.

"That's the way to look at it," rejoined Dr. Gerry. "Let's rejoice in the hope."

Judge Herford bent his heavy brows.

"There can't be any hope, Gerry," he said flatly, "if Faunce has told us the truth."

"It's not a thing about which any man would want to jest," he replied slowly, purposely misunderstanding Herford's speech. "We believed him dead. If a miracle has happened, the body must have been recovered and resuscitated. I can't believe a word of this!"

Herford, however, pursued his questions, the lawyer in him roused to ignore his new position as a father-in-law.

"Then you admit that his body might have been found?"

Faunce hesitated. He looked up and met Dr. Gerry's eye, and it revealed the full force of the situation. Gerry believed that Overton lived!

Faunce experienced again the terrible sensation of the world falling to pieces around him while he still survived. If Overton lived, he was delivered from the hideous remorse that gnawed at his heart; but he was ruined. No power on earth could save him from public shame.

Reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet.

"To stay slender reach for a Lucky Strike instead of a sweet when your sweet-tooth tempts you. I have practised this for years and find it a most effective way of retaining a trim figure. There is something to the toasting process which develops a flavor in Luckies that completely satisfies the desire for sweets. At the same time, toasting takes out the irritants and Luckies never affect the voice."

BILLIE BURKE

Note: Authorities attribute the enormous increase in Cigarette smoking to the improvement in the process of Cigarette manufacture by the application of heat. It is true that during 1928, Lucky Strike Cigarettes showed a greater increase than all other Cigarettes combined. This confirms in no uncertain terms the public's confidence in the superiority of Lucky Strike.

ELK NINE WINS IN HEATED CONTEST

Runs and more runs mean victory for baseball teams, according to the copy book. But sometimes it almost fails to prove true.

Take the Richmond Elks and the San Pablo ball club for instance last Sunday.

The local Bills stepped to the plate in the first inning and collected eight runs, enough to win any old ball game. They were content to rest upon their laurels.

Imagine their embarrassment when the San Pablans came back and gave the Elks the scare of their lives by tying the game 11 to 11 in the ninth inning.

Here was a chance for someone to be a hero. Jack Snavely was it. In the last half of the ninth he stepped to the plate and smacked the homer that won the game.

Gomez, Gauldoni Making Showing In Coast League

From present indications Richmond will be represented in the Pacific Coast baseball league by William Gauldoni and Vernon "Lefty" Gomez.

Gauldoni is with the Hollywood Stars and has been going great guns with the team. Recently he replaced Johnny Bassler behind the plate and caught five innings against Seattle. He knocked out three hits in a nine inning contest the day previous to the Seattle game.

Gomez chucked for the San Francisco Seals against the Monterey Stickers Sunday. He allowed only one single and fanned seven men. Manager Nick Williams of the Seals kept "riding" Lefty throughout the game to use his overhead throw and to forget his side arm motion. Williams believes that Gomez' overhand throw is the best he has and is trying to develop it.

Tony Berardo of Richmond is with the Hollywood Stars and from all indications he may remain there.

RASKOB MAY GO BACK TO OLD POST

NEW YORK, March 4.—UP—Almost four months after the end of his active participation in the recent presidential campaign New York financial circles still await the announcement that will determine the business future of John J. Raskob, who resigned as chairman of the finance committee of the General Motors corporation to devote his time to Governor Smith's candidacy.

"He is still a vice president and director of the corporation and has been invited, it is understood, to resume his place as head of the finance committee," reports Sales Management magazine in its current issue. Neither Raskob nor the coroporation has made any formal commitment, however.

Pierre S. du Pont, who resigned as chairman of the board of General Motors to aid the Smith candidacy, has been succeeded by his brother Lammot du Pont in the chairmanship. Net earnings of General Motors in 1928 under the du Pont-Raskob regime were $276,468,108 the largest in the history of the corporation.

Westinghouse To Treble Advertising

The 1929 program calls for 20,000 newspaper advertisements in 600 cities.

School nurse, says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."

Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

HOOVER TAKES PRESIDENTIAL OATH

...ads reaching far out to the borders of the capitol grounds were so silent that even the soft patter of the light rain seemed noisy.

Hoover Solemn

The new president of the United States was the solemn, sober-eyed figure of that whole gathering. Near him stood Calvin Coolidge, smiling his quiet little smile, plainly light hearted. He was a slight but agile figure who had shifted the tremendhous burden of responsibility of the presidency to the broad shoulders of Herbert Hoover, and the weight already was bearing down with a relentless, solemn pressure upon the nation's new chief executive.

The day had begun with overcast skies and a chill wind blowing just briskly enough to make the many banners of the capitol wave gently. By 9 a. m. the people were coming. An hour later there were thousands around the capitol and by noon the whole plaza which fronts the capitol and lies between the House and Senate office buildings was closely packed. Many hundreds stood upon the roofs and cornices of the government buildings looking down upon the ceremony.

Leave White House

A little after 11 a. m., Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge, and Mr. and Mrs. Hoover came out of the White House.

Mrs. Coolidge was dressed in grey with a fox fur neckpeece and carried sweet peas and orchids. Mrs. Hoover wore a black wrap. She and her husband were unsmiling.

As the White House car rolled away from the building where the Coolidges had lived so long, Mrs. Coolidge turned and waved a farewell to the servants who stood watching the final departure of a mistress they loved. At the White House gates the car was stopped and Mrs. Coolidge shook hands with the policeman on guard, assuring him that some day she would see him again.

Crowds on Pennsylvania avenue acclaimed the executive party as it sped towards the capitol and the acclaim was acknowledged with the doffing of hats and a pretty gesture from Mrs. Coolidge.

Curtis Takes Oath

Arriving at the capitol, the Hoovers and the Coolidges were escorted to the senate chamber. There, with the diplomatic corps gathered in all the radiance of its formal dress, high army and navy officers in full uniform, and the members of the senate and the house, Charles Curtis was given the oath as vice-president. Charles Dawes, who for four years has been the vice president, spoke briefly, reiterating in a brief paragraph the desire he voiced so sensationally on his inauguration four years ago, to have the senate rules revised.

Curtis followed with a pledge to carry out the duties of his office and a hope that the work of the senate over which for the next four years he will preside, would be fruitful.

New senators were sworn in, while the executive party, with the diplomatic corps and high officials awaited the time to go to the capitol steps for the inauguration of the new president. Coolidge was in a spirited mood. He chatted with several friends. He smiled and seemed glad to be free of his responsibilities. Mr. Hoover quietly acknowledged greetings and spent much time in thought.

Calles Named Minister Of War In Mexico

seized Vera Cruz, Jalapa, Orizaba and Cordoba.

In the state of Sonora, on the northwestern border, Gen Manuel Aguirre, brother of Jesus Aguirre, had seized Nogales. The customs house and the Nogales branch of the National Bank of Mexico were in his hands.

Eight States Aid

The main strength of the revolution seemed centered in those two states. Various claims of the revolutionists said some eight or more other states were in sympathy with the revolution, although authentic reports from all points were lacking and strict censorship had been established. Among the other states claimed by the rebels were Sinaloa, Durango, Chihuahua, Colima, Nayarit, Oaxaca, Palisco and Coahila.

The convention of the nation revolutionary party at Queretaro has nominated Pascual Ortiz Rubio for president, dispatches to newspapers said.

It was doubtful whether the latter state was disaffected, however, since it was announced officially that Gen. Gonzalo Escobar, chief of military operations, was en route from Coahuila towards Mexico City with reinforcements for the government, indicating that there was no revolt there.

The progress of the revolt was not clear from the fragmentary reports that drifted in. It was attributed to the politico-military faction of Gilberto Valenzuela, independent candidate for the six year term for president, elections for which will be held this fall.

Charges Hurled

Valenzuela is a bitter opponent of Calles, who, although he retired from the presidency, is the leader of the National Revolutionary party. Valenzuela was accused by members of the chamber of deputies two weeks ago of plotting a revolt. He denied it, at the same time denouncing Calles and his political methods, but insisting that he sought the presidency by constitutional means.

Valenzuela's stronghold is in Sonora, where Governor Fausto Topete and General Francisco R. Manzo the latter chief of military operations in the state, are backing him.

It was officially announced that the government was preparing to send a strong force into Vera Cruz.

Troops Mobilize

There was great activity in the capital. Troops were being mobilized and the army air force was making ready at Val Buena field to join in the operations.

President Portes Gil appointed Calles acting secretary of war, in the absence of Secretary Joaquin Amaro, who is recovering from a serious injury to his eye.

Government activity centered at Chapultepec castle, the presidential residence where Portes Gil conferred most of the day with members of his cabinet and military authorities.

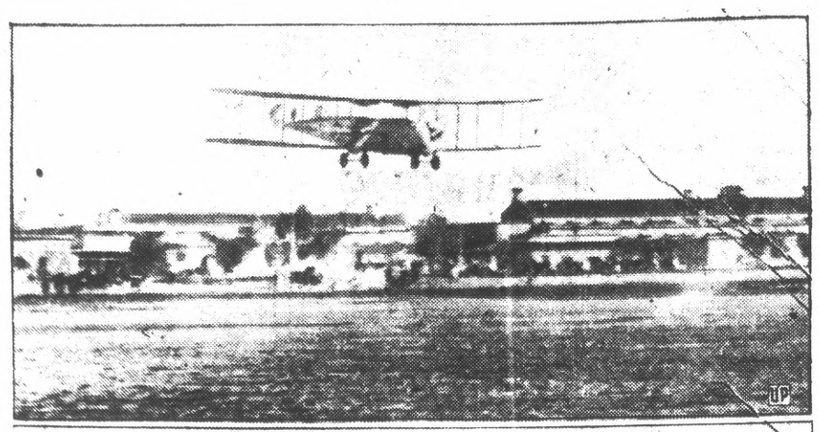

United States Ambassador D. W. Morrow called at the foreign office today to receive official news of the state of affairs. Morrow had returned hurriedly from his country residence at Cuernavaca, where a family week-end party shared by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was broken up by news of the revolt.

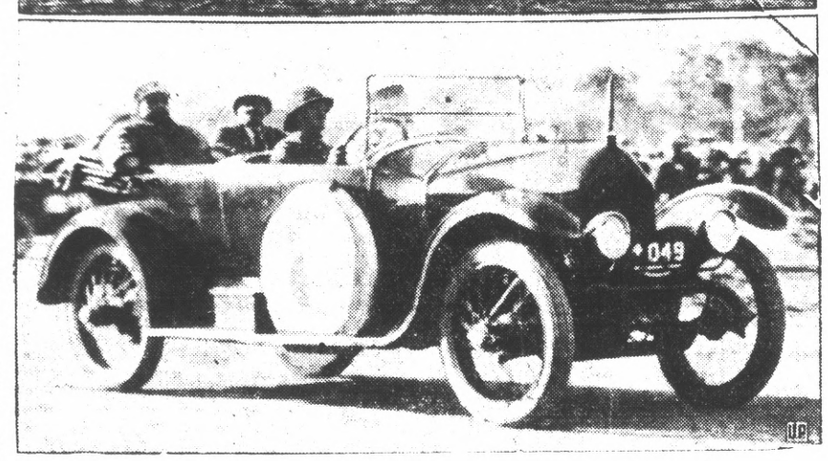

Col. Lindbergh, his right arm still in a sling, and driving with his left hand, brought his fiancee, Miss Anne Spencer Morrow and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, in one car. The ambassador and Mrs. Morrow were in another car.

POISON LIQUOR FATAL TO 13, 7 DYING

Seven others, several blind and in convulsions, are near death in hospitals.

Physicians agreed little could be done to save the sufferers from the horrible death which claimed the near score who drank each other's health a few days ago.

Authorities said it was probable that others might have been poisoned by the same experimental alcohol and their cases not reported.

Two Men Held

Two men, alleged bootleggers, are held on open charges in connection with the manufacture and sale of the poison liquor. Police refused to divulge the basis of their flat statement that the victims had been poisoned by a 50-gallon batch of alcohol, manufactured by a new process here last week.

The dead: John Dempsey, 33; Frank R. Aylward, 38, Clarence Hoppe, 28, Harold Huddleston, 28, Mrs. Ellen McFadden, 49, Richard Farra, 32, Edward Baldwin, 38, all of Peoria; W. A. Sammons 45, Chicago, Harold Neitle, 26, Charles Hollan, Washington, Ill.; Andrew Heaton, 65, Ben Teel, 60 and Marshal Easley, 60 of Vermont, Illinois.

7 Near Death

In Peoria hospital and Vermont's are seven who are not expected to live. They are Ray Vierderlock, 33, and John Phillips, 50, of Peoria; Edward Hanrahan, 38, Burlington, Ia.; Edward Bailey, 42, and Katherine Garg, 40; Wesley City, Ill., and Charles Cox, 49 and Laura Hetz, 43, of Vermont.

Six of the victims died today, three in Vermont; two at Washington and one here.
